Risk Assessments

The Management of Health & Safety at Work Regulations 1999 say employers must:

- carry out a risk assessment
- identify any significant risks (must be recorded if five or more employees)
- take steps to remove or control those risks
- appoint someone competent to advise them

A general risk assessment may be used to 'generally' assess the hazards typically found in routine activities and workplaces. Risk assessments are carried out/reviewed yearly in June/July by The Administrative Officer and Groundsman. All documents used are kept in the administration office in a white file. The Administrative Officer and Groundsman are responsible for signing off all general and buildings risk assessments and the Safety Officer is responsible for signing off match day risk assessments. Any control measures are included in Statements of Work.
